The activity and strength of stocks this week has reflected a hopeful and confident spirit over the outlook for the new year. The year-end stringency of the money market has been ignored in the confidence that a few days would see relaxed rates, with a return to the channels of the money market of vast resources through the unprecedented disbursements on account of interest and dividends, and of the currency which has been in active circulation to accommodate the needs of the great holiday trade, the volume of which has been an index of the great prosperity which the country enjoys. The conviction has been prevalent that the January relaxation of money rates would bring a rise in stocks, and the buying of last week and this has represented an effort to anticipate the January rise. There has been little evidence of what Wall street calls outside interest in the market, meaning the rank and file of speculators the country over. The operations bear the stamp of professional traders of large means joined in speculative syndicates and of bankers and large financial interests. The movement seems to be based on general considerations of confidence in the stability of values, the sustained prosperity of the country and a prospective willingness of capital to invest in securities at their present high level of valuation. The practical consummation of the conversion of Northern Paclfic preferred stock into common stock, which was an essential to the plan of organization of the Northern Securities Company, has been an element of strength for stocks. The adjustment of hostilities which seem to be still latent in the transcontinental railroad situation was felt to be dependent on the success of this plan, and its progress relieves anxiety caused by the evidences of obstruction to it. It is hoped also that the way is thus opened for a resumption of some of the important projects for further combinations which were interrupted by the shock of the Northern Pacific corner last May. On the prospect for the coming year in the stock market opinion in the financial world is by no means unanimous. The present high level of prices is a subject of some misgiving, even among the bulls. It is pointed out that not a few departments of the market recovered after the May panic to higher prices than before, notwithstanding the excess of speculation which resulted in that upset to the market. There are many stocks whose prices were the highest on record at the end of the year. The speculation which made those prices was counting upon continued increase in | 867,100. the earning power rather than upon mere maintenance of that power. The decrease in earnings of railroads compared with the corresponding period of last year, shown by the latest returns, revives the question whether the railroad world is to escape the | ish fours, 77%. effect of a shortage in the corn crop, which confessedly at a rate which requires a continuance of the recent level of prosperity to make adequate return upon new securities as investments. High prices have been paid in all cases for properties included in mergers. Not only is this true in the case of railroad properties, but presumably of industrial properties, although public information in the latter case is much less. The Amalgamated Copper incident and the developments in that trade are felt to be pregnant with suggestion of possible results to flow from a decline in demand for products of other industries capitalized on a basis of heavy consumption at high prices. The course of the country's foreign trade towards decrease of manufactured exports and increase of imports is suggestive of lessening demand and increasing competition from the depressed foreign markets. The lack of the financial stimulus of enormous foreign credits by reason of favorable trade balances already has been conspicuously evident. Signs of revival in foreign financial and industrial affairs raise the question of the relative attraction for capital of a turning point from depression and a level far advanced towards expansion if not inflation. The inference between these con-

prominent capitalists to embark on further such an unblushing fraud as once it was, securities and a strong stock market give It Does Not Compare Favorably with promise of two parties in the speculative field in the future. The bond market has been fairly active still not trust too much in the name; the but somewhat irregular, and there has grew at the place whose name it bears, mortgage securities. The receipts of cattle this week have been comparatively liberal, the total indicating a gain of 2,400 over last week and Good to choice cows 3.50@ 4.25 1,800 over the same week a year ago and Fair to medium cows 2.750 3.35 the corresponding week two years ago. Thus far this year there is an increase of nearly 1,100 over the same period last year. This week opened with only moderate supplies in all markets and with an increased demand from practically all sources. The natural result was a decided upward movement in values. Initial sales of the week were usually 10@15c higher than the close of last week and in some instances a greater gain than that was registered. There was a continued active demand throughout the week for all fat stock and current prices were strong but probably no higher than at the beginning of the week. There | $5.75 to $6.20, with the bulk going at $5.80@ was a continued absence of top export | 5.95. Packers took all offered and the marsteers, but some of the offerings were good enough to bring $6.60, which is the highest price obtained for a load in this market since early in October, 1899. A few fancy cows and heifers also sold at extreme prices, the former being reported as high as $4.75 and the latter $5.25. Bulls did not show much change, the top being $4.75, and there was an unusually strong demand for calves at higher prices, quite a number having been sold at $7. Late in the week there was some tendency toward weakness in prices of certain of the less desirable grades but buyers did not succeed in breaking the market to any appreciable extent. The receipts of cattle to-day were larger than usual at this time in the week and a good variety of grades were represented. All buyers were in the market at the opening and with rather aggressive competition the offerings from the start changed hands those current at the highest time this week.
